

Zorro

What am I?

African Pygmy Hedgehog

Where do I live in the wild?

African Pygmy Hedgehogs are pet animals and they aren't found in the wild. They were bred from 2 different types of small African hedgehogs.

How am I looked after as a pet?

I live in a large indoor cage with a wheel to run on and a house to sleep in. I always have a bowl of cat food and a bowl of water.

What do I eat?

Pet hedgehogs eat cat kibble. They also love dried meal worms and scrambled eggs. Wild hedgehogs eat mostly insects, worms, and snails

What do I look like?

Small and spikey with big eyes and a long nose. African pygmy hedgehogs can be many different colours including white, cream, brown and grey.

Why do we love Zorro?

Zorro is adorably cute! He is a lively, nosey and adventurous boy who loves to explore. He can be naughty and move everything around in his cage!

My Story:

Hi everyone. My name is Zorro, Lion Learners East Midlands most prickly creature!

I came to live with Kristan in the East Midlands when I was just a tiny baby. I was very cute but not very friendly. I made Kristan work really hard to be my friend. She didn't give up, though, and now I have become quite a show off. I love to go out and meet new people and let them stroke my spines. When I uncurl to say hello and relax my back I'm not too spiky. I feel just like a hair brush!

At home I love to spend my nights running on my wheel while you are asleep. I also love to get out of my cage and explore. I even love the garden but only in the summer when it is nice and warm.
