

Batman and Fluffy

Species

Lionhead rabbit (Oryctolagus cuniculus)

Habitat

Lionheads are a domestic breed, but wild rabbits like areas with lots of grass and space, which is what our bunnies need too.

Care

Brothers, Batman and Fluffy are rescue rabbits. They live together in a big enclosure with a tunnel connecting an indoor pen to a spacious outdoor run. Their long hair needs to be regularly brushed, a bit like ours.

Food

Rabbits need lots of hay and grass with a few veggies and pellets. Unfortunately, Batman and Fluffy have severely misaligned teeth and can't chew hay. So they have special fibregel on their food to keep their tummies' healthy.

Characteristics

A small breed with fur around their head, which looks like a lion's mane. Their big eyes are on the side of their head so they can keep a look out for anything scary. Their noses are always twitching.

Why we love Batman and Fluffy

Batman and Fluffy are two of the gentlest, friendliest rabbits you'll ever meet. They love to snuggle up together and on people's laps.

Batman and Fluffy's story

Batman and Fluffy were rescued from a miserable life spent in tiny, unsanitary cages, isolated from each other and fed the wrong foods. When Clare found them they were underweight and suffering from a range of medical problems.

Clare nursed them back to health with the help of numerous vet visits. They were vaccinated for the first time and neutered so they could be bonded together. It's sometimes hard to bond two boy rabbits but fortunately Batman and Fluffy loved each other from the offset and are now inseparable.

Sadly, they will have teeth problems for life and need a special diet to stay healthy. But the good news is, they are now flourishing and a good weight.

Their favourite things are snuggling up together, getting scratched behind their ears and binky hopping outside. This is a special type of jump rabbits do when they're happy.

Both rabbits love attention, probably more so than most bunnies and we're sure they think they're more human than rabbit! Batman is a complete cuddle bunny and enjoys lots of strokes. Fluffy is more inquisitive and prefers to hop around and bump you with his nose every now and then. It's his way of saying hello.
